Didsbury development down MPC approves microbrewery

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

Development in the Town of Didsbury has taken a dip this year.

According to the town's development department, statistics have declined since it experienced record numbers in 2006.

Presently, construction value for the town is at $5,632,479, compared to $6,793,100 at the same time in 2007, and $7,532,353 in 2006.

Town planning and development officer Robert Wigg says it's difficult to make a comparison between the years.

"It's obviously much more valid to do it at the end of the year," he said.

"It's not unreasonable to assume that things have slowed down a little bit but I think that's a provincial situation."

Wigg says the development pace over the past two years was not what would be considered a reasonable rate.

"We've slowed down to what I think may be a bit more of a reasonable pace, compared to what was in 2006 and 2007, which was almost a very unrealistic pace," he said.

"Those were nice numbers, but the numbers we're seeing now are still very good in our mind. It's not like things are collapsing."

So far this year, the town has 28 residential permits, compared to 43 at the same time in 2007, and 46 in 2006.

In addition the town has seen three commercial permits, two industrial permits, one institutional permit, and 24 other permits.

Wigg says he's hopeful that industrial and commercial numbers are on the way up.

"We have a couple of projects that we're working on with people right now, which is the same as the commercial numbers."

Included in that, is an addition to main street.

Last week, the town's municipal planning commission approved the commercial business application for a microbrewery called Lagerlands Brewing Corporation.

"We have a couple of other projects for main street that are very close to the approval stage as well."

By the end of the year, Wigg says he expects to see a similar number of housing starts to last year.

Typically the fall is the busiest season for development in town as people try and get groundwork done before the winter, says Wigg.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW - An aerial look at the proposed design with existing care setting

Long-term care plans progress

Town hall meeting draws few

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

The Town of Didsbury hosted a town hall meeting at the Five-O Club last week.

Approximately 10 residents were in attendance for a meeting that included information on the town's heritage home program, animal control services, and a Calgary Health Region (CHR) representative who presented an update on the Didsbury Hospital's long-term care project.

Didsbury mayor Brian Wittal says it was exciting to hear that the budget for the project has been approved.

"We're pleased that it's finally moving forward," he said.

"We were concerned with the change in the health regions that perhaps projects would be put on hold, but this one was approved."

According to Calgary Health Region spokesperson Leanne Dohy, the budget has been approved by the former CHR board at $26.5 million.

Director of regional projects for the CHR, Les Marles says the project is now at the detailed design stage, which is a step that determines how the building will be constructed. The location, layout, and size of the facility have already been established.

Marles says the facility is being designed for Leadership in energy and environmental design (LEED) Silver, which is a standard in energy efficiency.

"The building is being designed to adhere to the principles of sustainability, which may include how they will use the materials, and how the building consumes energy," he said.

The CHR announced IBI Group, a Calgary-based architectural firm, for the design of the project.

The facility will be a 60 bed, free-standing building east of the hospital.

"The residents of Didsbury and the surrounding area have been exceedingly patient and the region would like to thank the community for its understanding," says Lori Anderson, Executive Director, Rural Health in a prepared statement. "We are committed to ensuring an appropriate range of long-term care options for the residents of Didsbury and area."

Construction of the hospital replacement is anticipated to take approximately 18 months to complete.

Point Counter Point

The editors of the Carstairs Courier and Didsbury Review lock horns in a monthly debate.

For

MARK LAYCOCK

The age-old debate of freedom and smoking is nothing new, however in Canada, the issue has been given new life with the passing of a bill in Ontario which bans smoking in a vehicle while a child under the age of 16 is present.

The law has been a hot button issue since a similar ban was implemented in Nova Scotia and British Columbia earlier this year.

In Canada, second-hand smoke claims the lives of 800 people every year reports Health Canada.

Cigarettes contain over 60 carcinogenic chemicals, which contribute towards the development of cancer, asthma, heart disease and emphysema.

One should bear in mind that while the individual motoring down the highway may be blowing smoke out the window, some of that smoke does trickle into the back of a vehicle where it lingers without proper ventilation—especially during the frigid winter months.

Most people have been in the back of a vehicle with a smoker and most would admit they can eventually smell the distinct smell of burning tobacco.

Children are especially susceptible to the effects of second-hand smoke, with babies and children having more frequent lower respiratory tract complications such as bronchitis, pneumonia and coughing. Furthermore, babies have a higher risk of dying from sudden infant death syndrome after inhaling second-hand smoke.

The issue of banning smoking in a vehicle goes far beyond the issue of just personal choice, since those in the back of the car typically have no choice in the matter at all.

Smoking in all public and private buildings is illegal in Alberta and several other provinces, a move that allows smokers the right to still smoke by going outside, and those who wish not, by being provided with a haze-free environment.

Furthermore, smokers enraged with the exponential rise in cigarette costs should keep in mind that the medical costs for a young child who develops asthma from second-hand smoke could have you reaching for two or three more cigarettes in a sitting to offset the stress of paying those bills.

For those still determined to smoke while driving, I ask you this: is it too much of an inconvenience to pull over for a few minutes and have a quick drag? Not only that, but is it the end of the world if you have to wait an additional 30 minutes before you can have a cigarette?

If you wouldn't give your 10-year-old child a pack of cigarettes on a weekly basis, then why allow them to puff on second-hand smoke for extended periods of time while in a car?

The Ontario Lung Association has stated that a single hour in a smoke filled car is the equivalent of giving a child an entire pack of cigarettes.

Do a favour for not only your children, but for yourself and butt out—or at least for just the 10 minutes it takes to drive the little ones to school.

Against

JOSH SKAPIN

Mark, as always, you make some solid points but I can't agree.

To be clear, knowing what we know today, I consider smoking around children in a closed-off environment to be irresponsible.

I remember going to elementary school, and being around classmates wearing My Little Pony or Transformer T-shirts that made them smell like pack-a-day puffers.

That's scary, and sad, and my hopscotch pal's nicotine soaked top may or may not be a reflection of what coated their lungs—but there's no question that the secondhand smoke had a lingering effect.

With that said, it would be inappropriate to allow the line between common sense parenting and the need for police interference to become blurred.

The problem with targeting smoking, even if it is exclusively for vehicle use, is that it sets a precedent.

What the province would be saying is "we don't like you smoking around your child because it's unhealthy."

And I won't argue against that. But what gives the government the right to decide a ban against smoking in vehicles with youngsters is what they should lawfully enforce—as opposed to other irresponsible activities?

Maybe they should tell police to start taking complaints on parents who allow their children to curl up with a big bag of potato chips and watch television or play X-Box for seven hours a day, every day.

What about the ones who give the green light to their young children who pour through the streets of Carstairs and Didsbury at all hours of the night?

Not exactly behaviour of protective guardians.

And what about the unnecessary burden placed on police? I suppose, they don't have enough on their plate already. With RCMP detachments across the province in dire need of staffing assistance, placing a new responsibility on their shoulders doesn't seem like the wisest reaction.

I don't know about you, but I'd much rather the RCMP place their focus on concerns such as a booming presence of crystal meth in Alberta, instead of cruising for smokers with kids.

On top of that, I think if a similar bill is passed throughout Canada, it'll only be the first step.

You start with cars, next thing you know it'll be homes.

This bill isn't far from police investigations into whether or not a minor was home while a cigarette was lit.

While I would love to see parents stop blowing smoke in the faces of their children, let's keep our crime fighters, fighting crime and not hunting down nicotine addicts.

Ditching the car

I agree with you about how people should ride their bicycles. I ride my bicycle as often as the weather allows me to. I love the morning air and the cool breeze. I find it relaxing and enjoyable. I find it easier to ride Uptown Olds and I can always find parking! My job is located in Olds. I also recently bought a new dual purpose dirtbike, 230 CFR Honda to ride to work. My cost for gas is around $7 to fill the tank. I own a Ford Explorer that takes over $91 to fill, which is parked. It used to cost me around $55. I think more people should dust their bicycles off and ride.

Ups and downs of aerobatics

A pilot's project

photos and illustration by Carla Victor

BY JOSH SKAPIN
Didsbury Review

With his head turned to the heavens, Daryl Lowey, who was 12 at the time, observed a small red plane dancing through the clouds.

He and the other audience members at an air show in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan couldn't take their eyes off of the stunting aircraft.

An interest in planes turned to passion, and Lowey earned his pilot's license 14 years later.

Today Lowey, a Didsbury resident, and fixture at the Olds-Didsbury airport, is an aerobatic pilot.

As Lowey explains, his addiction to not only taking flight, but accomplishing daring feats with his aircraft, happened by chance.

One day, a man named Dave Gillispie offered Lowey a ride in his plane, which he had purchased from the Ray Ban Golds Aerobatic team, a squad that Lowey had seen perform at Expo '86.

"I jumped at the chance," he said. Gillispie pulled up into a loop, causing Lowey to feel the G-forces pushing him down into his seat.

"As a pilot, it's a lot easier because you know what to expect. As a passenger, you don't know what's coming next."

Next, Gillispie executed a hammerhead turn, zipping the plane straight up, kicking it over, and shooting straight back down again.

"I was hooked," said Lowey.

In the late '80s, Lowey attended an aerobatics competition in Minnesota, in which he captured third place.

"That was the clincher," he says, which was followed by Lowey purchasing his first flyable aircraft, the Citabria.

Competitions are not advertised, because if they were it would be classified as an air show.

Competitors have an aerobatic box, which is a little larger than a kilometre square, that they have to stay within when completing their manoeuvres. Judges are posted along the box, where they grade aircraft on conformity, and direct lines, among other standards.

"It's like figure skating in the sky," said Lowey.

In addition to competing, Lowey also performs at the same types of air shows that first captured his imagination.

"When I perform at an air show, yes I get paid, yes I'm having a blast doing it, but I'm doing it for the people who are down on the ground," he said.

"All I could remember before I blacked out, was looking at the airspeed indicator which ran 190."

"I want them to enjoy it. For me to just go up and be stupid is absolutely ridiculous. I've got to be able to perform at a standard."

Lowey's first air show was at a homecoming in Central Butte Saskatchewan, but his most memorable show was a week later, for his high school reunion.

Lowey had only two people that knew what he had planned, and it was their responsibility to clear the golf course, which was where the event took place.

"I will never forget, my classmates laying down on the golf green, after I was done, to spell 'Hi Daryl' on the golf green. It was something else."

Soon after purchasing his Citabria, Lowey made a choice to attempt something different.

"I had practised and done some regular flights with it, but I thought I would try flying this thing upside down."

Because of the design of the wing, which he wasn't used to navigating, he accidentally turned the plane into a 135 mile an hour inverted dive.

"I was diving towards the group upside down," he said.

"I panicked, and did the absolute wrong thing, pulling on the stick."

By Lowey tugging on the stick, the plane reacted by completing the back half of a loop.

"All I could remember before I blacked out, was looking at the airspeed indicator which ran 190."

The never exceed speed for a Citabria was 165.

"I was 30 miles an hour faster than what the airplane was designed to fly."

The plane levelled off on its own, and after five seconds, Lowey came to, immediately flying it to Saskatoon for an inspection.

Because of that experience, Lowey attended an aerobatics instructor course.

"Anyone who wants to try performing aerobatics, I would recommend they get trained by a competent aerobatics instructor."

DARYL LOWEY
Aerobatic pilot

Prior to taking the course, Lowey's skills were self-taught.

"What the instructor taught me was that I hadn't taught myself quite right," he said.

"I taught myself safely, but to get that perfect loop in the sky there were things I needed to know about a loop," he said.

"Some pilots think a loop is as simple as pulling on the stick and allowing the plane to go up and over, but it's not."

At present, a manoeuvre called the tail slide alludes Lowey, but not due to a lack of ability on his part.

"I would love to fly it, but my aircraft is not designed for it," he said.

A tail slide means the pilot sends the plane straight up, before letting it fall backwards.

However, a plane that Lowey is currently building at the hangar in Didsbury, is expected to allow him to complete the stunt.

The Citabria has a performance weight of 1,450 pounds, with 150 horsepower.

In contrast, his newest creation, will be 150 pounds lighter with twice the horse power.

"It'll be a fun one to fly," he said, adding that he doesn't expect to have his latest creation in the skies at air shows for a few years.

"The biggest reason is, I have to learn the aircraft. Once it's flyable, I have to get up and learn its characteristics. I'm not going to do that in front of a crowd."

One of the other things Lowey has done, is put together a class for people who are afraid to fly.

Gowns of the past

BY JOSH SKAPIN
 Didsbury Review

The Didsbury Museum went for a June tradition for this year's annual pie social theme.

According to the museum's Joyce Gerbrandt, 16 wedding gowns, joined tuxedos from across the century on display for onlookers to enjoy.

"June is known as wedding month, so that's what we decided to do," she said.

"We asked our members to start loaning gowns, tuxes, and wedding photos."

While the membership wasn't responsible for the entire showcased collection, Gerbrandt says community members were helpful in assembling the display.

If the gown had not been worn by a Didsbury resident, each piece had some relation to the town.

"We wanted that Didsbury connection," said Gerbrandt.

"I'm thankful that the people of Didsbury like our museum and come through for us when we ask."

The showcase included dresses from every decade from the past century, other than the 1920s and 1960s.

One struggle Gerbrandt and others assisting in the display encountered while arranging the exhibit was the mannequins.

Many of the dresses were difficult to tug across a mannequin, due to them having "really tiny waists," most likely attributed to the use of girdles.

Alberta's Mandatory Ignition Interlock Program

Effective July 1, 2008, Alberta's Mandatory Ignition Interlock Program will come into effect for Alberta drivers who have:

- Been convicted of drinking and driving with a blood-alcohol reading of double the legal limit or higher.
- Refused to provide a breath or blood sample.
- Been a repeat offender during the preceding 10-year period.

After serving the prohibition period, drivers must apply to the Alberta Transportation Safety Board to have an ignition interlock device installed in their vehicle of choice at their own expense.

The ignition interlock is an alcohol-sensing device attached to a vehicle's ignition system. When alcohol is detected the driver will not be able to start or drive the vehicle. The device also calls for random breath samples. Reinstatement or unrestricted driving privileges at the end of six months depends on the participant's performance in the Program.

The Mandatory Ignition Interlock Program is part of the Alberta Government's commitment to increase safety on our roads and decrease drinking-and-driving incidences.

For more information on this Program, visit www.infratrans.gov.ab.ca, scroll down and click on the Alberta Transportation Safety Board icon. To call toll-free, dial 310-0000, then 780-427-7178 or 403-297-3466.

"The biggest reason for people becoming sick in an airplane is a lack of understanding," he said.

"In a commercial jet, they hear the wheels going up, but they don't know it's the wheels going up. All they hear is a rough sound and they start to get queasy as a result of it."

Lowe owned and operated an aerobatics and banner-towing business in Saskatchewan until 2003, which is when he moved to Alberta.

He is now looking into opening an aerobatics flight school in the Didsbury area.

Staying safe

In order for Lowe to compete in air shows, every year he is assessed by an Air Show Competency Evaluation (ACE) evaluator.

"There's an evaluator out there who will have a look at my routine, my aircraft, and me personally, and decide that I am safe to fly air shows," said Lowe, of the program that was created to protect the public.

Transport Canada regulations say aerobatic pilots must not direct any energy towards the crowd at air shows.

"They take that to such an extreme, and I agree with Transport Canada for this," he said. However, at one of Lowe's first air shows, his routine included an action that broke that rule.

"I shut my engine off, and without the engine running let my airplane coast up towards the crowd."

Lowe was disciplined for the move.

"Even though I was coasting at a walking pace, I was directing energy towards the crowd, so that's how extreme they take that on."

Presently, the aviation regulators in Canada are developing an overall safety manual to be followed for different events and performers, to which Lowe, who is employed as a health and safety consultant, has been offering his feedback via e-mail.

"Safety is huge," he said.

"Whether it's an airplane or a snowmobile, if you don't respect that piece of equipment, you're going to kill yourself...Years ago, when you were doing a roll, it would take you five seconds to get around. Now, the speed of these airplanes is 320 degrees per second.

"You used to go up to find the limits of an airplane, now the airplane is taking you up to find your limits."

Prairie partner news

BY LAURA MILNE

This month was a busy month! On May 2 our club entertained the residents of the Aspen Ridge Lodge by bringing in animals of the farm for them to look at and touch. The Lodge also invited residents from the Carstairs and Sundre lodges.

We had our district heifer show and then not long afterward the annual steer show and sale was held in Carstairs. Thank you to all the buyers, we really appreciate your support.

Congratulations to Laura Milne as she won Club Champion and congratulations to Ryan Hunter as he won Reserve Club Champion.

The Alberta Electric System Operator (AESO) is meeting with members of the community to provide information and to hear your feedback on the need for reinforcement of the transmission system between the Edmonton and Calgary regions. Construction of a new transmission line between the regions is being considered within the grey study area of the map. A second reinforcement is forecast to be needed in the next few years. After receiving community input, AESO will make decisions on need and preferred routing and file a Needs Identification Document with the Alberta Utilities Commission.

Information will be available on options being considered for reinforcement.

Two transmission facility owners, AltaLink and ATCO Electric, will also be in attendance to answer your questions.

Please join us at any of the information sessions listed below between 4:00 PM and 8:00 PM. At each open house various representatives will be available to show you the alternatives and to listen to your opinions and advice.

Town welcomes new chief financial officer

Earlier this month, the Town of Didsbury welcomed a former area resident back as its new Chief Financial Officer.

James Reichenbacher, a Certified Management Accountant, began his new position with the Town of Didsbury on June 4, 2008. Reichenbacher returns to Didsbury after a number of years working and living in Whitecourt, Alberta. His previous experience includes accounting work within private industry and one year's tenure with the school board in Whitecourt.

Returning to Didsbury with Reichenbacher are his wife, Alison and four children: Jordan, 14; Joshua, 11; Olivia, 4; and Ty, 2. He says that his interest in returning to Didsbury are the family and that both he and his wife still have in the area, and that they both missed the small-town atmosphere of Didsbury.

"We're looking forward to being back in Didsbury... and looking forward to being back in civilization," Reichenbacher said.

"I'm amazed at the amount of change in Didsbury, and excited about the growth. There are so many neat new places, like Memorial Park and lots of cultural opportunities."

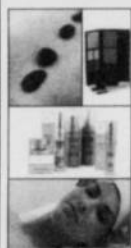

Reichenbacher plans to spend the next six months

"molding myself to the needs of the departments, Council and the community."

"I want to support the changes that have taken place in the last year, and to enhance or support the service to the community."

Isaac (Ike) Wiebe

Ike Wiebe was born near Wymark, Saskatchewan, on October 18, 1914
to Sarah (Olfert) & John Wiebe. Ike accepted Christ as his personal Savior while attending Bible School and was baptized a short time later.
He remained active in the church throughout his life and recently his focus was to work towards a vision of love, forgiveness & reconciliation.

In 1961 he married Marlene Loewen and together they raised three children on the family farm near Didsbury. Throughout his life, Ike worked a number of jobs including coalmining, logging, driving truck, driving city transit & school bus, farming, and finally at Banner Pharmacaps before retiring.

Ike was an avid stick curler, armchair sports fan, practical joker, and enjoyed fishing, camping and the latest "good joke". He especially enjoyed spending time with his 8 grandkids. Ike's unexpected death on June 5, 2008 at age 73 has left a significant hole in our family's heart.

Cherishing his memory and missing him deeply are his wife -
Marlene Wiebe; Mom Justina Loewen; Children - Donita &
Tim Wiebe-Neufeld, Joanne & Gary Peters, Steve & Fonda
Wiebe; Grandkids - Darian & Jacob, Kyla, Stacy & Danika, McKinnon, Hudson & Kiana; 6 Brothers, 6 Sisters, their spouses, and a huge bouquet of extended family & friends.

A celebration of Ike's life was held at the Berghal Mennonite Church on June 9 with Pastor Elwin Garland officiating.
Ike, you were loved and you will be missed - until we meet again.

"God gives us memories so we can have roses in winter."

with her Grandmother. She joined the Women's Air Corp at the beginning of WW II and served until 1945. She met her future husband Leonard, just as the war ended and they were married a few days later. Florrie arrived in Canada via the Ile de France on May 6, 1946 and, after a brief stay in Trochu, moved to Edmonton with Len while he attended university. After a short stay in Brooks and Olds, the family settled in Didsbury, Alberta where she lived most of her adult life until moving to Calgary in 1986.

Florrie was predeceased by her husband Leonard in 1987 and is survived by her sons/daughters-in-law Gary and Wanda Slipp, Bill Slipp and Michael and Janice Slipp in addition to 6
Grandchildren and 3 Great Grandchildren.

The family thanks the staff of the Colonel Belcher Residence, Bow View Manor and the Foothills Hospital for their excellent care over the past several years. In addition, we express our special thanks and appreciation to Judy Lively for her unfailing support and kind companionship.

110. In Memoriam

In loving memory of Alex Hunter who passed away June 26, 2006

One precious to our hearts is gone,
The voice we loved is stilled,
The place made vacant in our lives,
Can never more be filled,
Always a thought and many a tear,
For the one we miss and loved so dear,
The sudden way you had to die,
We shall always remember and wonder why,
No one can know the sorrow we share,
When the family meets and you're not there,
We hold our tears when we speak your name,
But the ache in our hearts remains the same.

Lovingly remembered by Lorraine & Grant McDonald & Family

In loving memory of Alex Hunter who passed away June 26th, 2006

There will always be this heartache and often the silent tears.

We shall cherish those precious memories of the days when you were here.

We hold you close within our hearts,

And there you will remain,

Please walk with us throughout our lives,

Until we meet again.

Remembering you is easy, we do it every day,

But missing you is a heartache that never goes away.

Forever loved and missed
